REAL ESTATE TRENDS

MOBs Continue to Outperform

Ever since the general office market started to hit hard times during the COVID-19 pandemic, many professionals involved in the medical outpatient building (MOB) space have proclaimed how fortunate they feel to be involved in a sector that typically remains stable during all economic cycles.

Healthcare Real Estate Insights

Real Estate Strategy is a Key Piece of ASC Growth

As outpatient care accelerates across the U.S., real estate has become a powerful lever for ASCs and health systems alike. Jon Vick, founding partner of ASCs Inc. and ASC Realty Advisors, joined Becker's to discuss the overlooked financial potential of ambulatory surgery center real estate, and why many physicians miss their window to fully capitalize on it.

Becker's ASC Review

Providers Have Become Big Buyers

It would be hard not to notice the recent uptick in medical outpatient building "reverse monetizations," or transactions in which hospital and health systems are buying outpatient buildings. In the first half of 2025, health systems made MOB acquisitions totaling $761 million, accounting for about 23 percent of all MOB purchases.

Retail-Ready Healthcare: A Design Blueprint for Modern MOBs

Healthcare is moving into the heart of everyday life, literally. In recent years, there has been a steady increase in the integration of retail and healthcare environments, particularly with medical office buildings positioned within or around retail centers. From an architectural and planning perspective, these blended spaces present a powerful opportunity to design environments that prioritize convenience, comfort, and dignity, while also meeting the clinical needs of modern medical practice.
